Use query to get data from database Select Distinct ID, NAME from TableName Fluorescent Methyl-BODIPY probes are used to track energy transfer between neuroreceptors. In this study we make use of a new fluorescent methylated BODIPY D1 dye, 6-NBD-5-methyl-BODIPY, to measure distances in the lipid domain of the plasma membrane. 6-NBD-5-methyl-BODIPY has low quantum yield and fluoresces red. Energy transfer from pheromone receptors to G protein-coupled receptors was studied by observing modulation of its emission. Antennae of male Drosophila respond to pheromone, and stimulation of these surfaces results in bursts of Ca²⁺ activity in the neurons of the antennal lobe. 6-NBD-5-methyl-BODIPY was applied to antennal lobe neurons expressing pheromone receptors to record real-time, subcellular events associated with activation of these cells. Stimulation of an antennal lobe neuron with the pheromone l-isobutyl-3-methyl-adrenaline (iBMA), and observation of 6-NBD-5-methyl-BODIPY emission showed that the probe binds within the lipid region of the plasma membrane and undergoes energy transfer from the pheromone receptors to G protein-coupled receptors.Q: Linearization of a differential equation I'm an engineering student and in my general theoretical equation (unable to specialize to a closed form equation or something like that) I have difficulty 570a42141b
